Grinding it out is the story of how a man named Ray Kroc took a small restaurant and made it into the largest fast food chain restaurant in the nation. Kroc begins by writing about his humble beginnings and his obsession with business and making good offers. This trait of character was His saving grace, and His death at the same time. Although his business talent was great for society, it was terrible for his personal relationships. Over the course of his life, Kroc adapted his business sense in his only way, and only those strong enough to withstand his passion for business would remain in his life. With Ray Kroc, it was all or nothing, and his all turned out to make him a fast food giant. Ray Kroc was always good at business. He knew a good idea when he saw him, and he was an amazing salesman. He started his business career selling paper cups. He knew how to find restaurants, soda shops and even hot dog stand owners, buy his paper cups and he knew how to keep them in business with him. Kroc never sold anyone a cup they didn't need. He was always very honest and prided himself on providing a tool to business owners that would improve their business and increase their customer and cash flow. After making a number of mistakes, including working as a pianist for a bar selling illegal liquor, and then selling bad real estate, he decided to go back to selling paper cups. One day, he stumbled upon an invention called Multimixer, which was a milkshake machine. This machine changed his life, the life of Americans and American culture forever. When he started getting calls from restaurant owners who wanted the mixer a couple of brothers had out in California, he visited the guys who were giving him so much work. These men were the McDonald brothers. When Kroc first saw McDonald's original store in action, he knew he could turn it into something bigger, something bigger and special. Kroc was in the 1950s when McDonald's empire began. It took a lot of time, energy and personal sacrifice to make the restaurant into the giant it is today. This book recalls those hard years and the effort that Ray Kroc put into living his dream and starting from the whim of a businessman. McDonald's was more than just a restaurant selling 15 cents burgers; it was a way of life for Ray Kroc, and it soon made it a way of life for most Americans. Grinding It Out: The Making of McDonald's "He enchants or antagonizes everyone he meets. But even his enemies agree that there are three things Ray Kroc does damn well: selling burgers, making money and telling stories." - by Grinding It Out Few entrepreneurs can claim to have radically changed the way they and Ray Kroc is one of them. His revolutions in the automation of food services, franchises, shared national training and advertising have earned him a place next to men and women who have founded not onlybut entire empires. But even more interesting than Ray Kroc, the businessman is Ray Kroc the man. Not your typical self-made tycoon, Kroc was fifty-two years old when he opened his first franchise. In Grinding It Out, you'll meet the man behind McDonald " s, one of the largest fast-food companies in the world with over 32.000 stores around the world. Irrepressible passionate, intuitive person, and born narrator, Kroc fascinates and inspires you on every page.
