With four colleges, universities unà 'state, two community colleges and more' alternative high schools and how many schools I can count on a 25-mile radius around my city ', the hills are full of sounds À "Pomp and CircumstanceÀ. " And 'the season where graduates wear funny hats and walk on a stage, a field or a gym floor after a seemingly interminable wait. It 'a time when parents and grandparents and entire extended families are happy to make là interminable wait. Once the person makes their trek across the room, she squeezes his hand and throws a tassel, cries and cries and sighs with relief and pride. I go to the ceremony dellà universities' every year. I love every minute of endless esso.Per me, it is sad when one is not participating student. Cà and 'always someone who tells me that he would rather sleep, which is' useless, that simply does not care of the ceremony or who can not' worry about making a list of chores to do to participate. For them, have their readings for while dress, take your hat off, go to the evidence, and especially sit in a ceremony without listening to speeches is boring, stupid, or a waste of time. This is not the hat. It is not even making speeches in which important people basically say the same important things year after year. It is about giving yourself and your family a way to signal that you are, in fact, from a chapter of another allà vita.Cà it is something in the mind and the human heart that loves ceremony. It's not so surprising then that the majority of American degrees share many of the same traditions: hats and dresses, presentation of a diploma, graduation speech, throwing hats in the air. They are more or less equal © because they all do the same claim. The graduation ceremony and 'the most' like a rite of passage allà age 'adults, unà statement that we are passing from youth to explore responsibility' adult. The student days are about to end. The adult life is comiciando.Non will be your favorite way to spend a day, but the graduation ceremony is not something to lose. The next day it looks different because © is different. You did the symbolic walk to the next chapter of your life in front of classmates, teachers and, hopefully, to some people who take particular to you. Those present witnessed your success and your new status. There là you did it! Yes, you're just a graduate if you never do the walk, but those who quit often express regret later. Without the glitz without the stupid costume, the walk and the talk, the school blends in life. Getting the diploma by mail sometime during the summer does not like cambiamento.It statement graduation day is also a gift for And the friends who supported you financially or emotionally during during Even if it doesn't strike you as significant, it could be extremely important to those who love you. Your graduation can be to fulfill a long-standing dream of parents and grandparents and relatives both living and dead. Your men could have saved, borrowed and mortgaged the house to get you through. Maybe they made you live at home in your 20s, fed you, and gave you the moral support they could. If they couldn't help with the money, they did what they could to encourage and support you in other ways. They've heard about your triumphs in hard classes, your complaints about the teachers, and your concerns about that class you've been avoiding until the last semester possible. No family? Unless you're a hermit, there were still friends, girlfriends or boyfriends, and teachers who were in your corner during your school years. It's little enough to make you see walking across a stage as a declaration of gratitude and love. This year, I will sit in the audience and watch with pride and pleasure as one of my children takes the ceremonial walk for a master's degree. As much as she doesn't like to be the center of attention, she's giving herself and us the gift of that special moment when she moves the aisle from right to left. Her father and I will tear each other up and catch up. His hard work and dedication to a field he loves deserve flowers and a celebration! I look forward to sharing a graduation day with the students I have been privileged to know and mentor for the past few years. Shaking their hands and meeting their families and friends is my way of telling them: "Well done. Welcome to what comes next. Next.
